

Contents

ABSTRACT.....	2
OVERZICHT.....	4
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	10
Chapter 1	11
Introduction and methodological overview.....	11
1.1. Introduction.....	11
1.2. The aim and relevance of the study.....	11
1.3. Hypothesis and research questions	13
1.4. Methodology and periodisation.....	14
1.5. Theoretical cornerstones of the study.....	16
1.5.1. Site of memory.....	16
1.5.2. Collective memory	18
1.5.2.1 Maurice Halbwachs.....	18
1.5.2.2. Memory as a social fact	20
1.5.2.3 Memory and identity	24
1.5.2.4. Commemoration	26
1.5.3. Confession and tradition.....	29
1.6. The Heidelberg Catechism in the life of the DRC	35
1.6.1. The Heidelberg Catechism as an institutional document	35
1.6.2. A community embedded in the Heidelberg Catechism	37
1.7. Some preliminary remarks	38
1.7.1. Unique but identical: the dilemma with the triplet of Dordt	38
1.7.2. The Formulae of Unity as rhetorical entity.....	39
1.7.3. Remembering the Synod of Dordt.....	41
1.7.4. Metaphors of tradition: “Bewaar het goede pand”	47
1.7.4.1. Identity and tradition	47
1.7.4.2. The goods of tradition – “het goede pand”	48
1.7.4.3. The transmittance of tradition – “bewaar”	50
1.8. Overview of chapters	51
Chapter 2	54

The Heidelberg Catechism and the memory of the Liberal Struggle (1862–1880)	54
2.1. Introduction	54
2.2. The door that had to be closed	54
2.2.1. The theological context of the 1860s	54
2.2.2. The Synod of 1862	58
2.2.3. The meaning of tradition	62
2.2.4. Orthodoxy, heterodoxy and the civil court.....	67
2.3. Remembering defeat: making sense of the court’s ruling	68
2.3.1. “Evangeliedienaar”	68
2.3.2. N.J. Hofmeyr as “WACHTER”	76
2.4. Remembering resistance: the liberals and Het Kerkverdedigings Genootschap	84
2.4.1. Resisting suppression and persecution	85
2.4.2. Resisting dogma, promoting principles	93
2.4.3. Progress and/as tradition?	97
2.5. Hofmeyr and Murray as gatekeepers of the Reformed tradition?	101
2.6. Conclusion	104
Chapter 3	107
Recollection and Repetition: The Heidelberg Catechism and the Du Plessis Case	107
3.1. Introduction	107
3.2. The case of Johannes du Plessis.....	108
3.2.1. A brief overview.....	108
3.2.2. The wagon of Uzzah: memory and metaphor	109
3.2.3. A struggle repeated?	111
3.2.4. A battle already won?.....	115
3.2.5. Tug of war: the memory of Andrew Murray.....	120
3.3. Preservation or transformation.....	123
3.3.1. Scientific progress and religious tradition	124
3.3.2. Confessional revision	128
3.3.2.1. Confessional revision prior to the Du Plessis case	128
3.3.2.2. Confessional revision during the Du Plessis case	131
3.3.2.3. Confessional revision in the aftermath of the Du Plessis case.....	138

3.4. Conclusion	140
Chapter 4	144
Sameness, stability and separation	144
4.1. Introduction	144
4.2. Crises and countermeasures	144
4.3. The DRC as a confessional church.....	149
4.3.1. “Volkskerk” or confessional church?	149
4.3.2. Historical continuity and the confessional church.....	151
4.3.3. The main elements of a confessional church	153
4.3.4. The rights, obligations and urgency of a confessional church	155
4.4. A divine but threatened heritage.....	159
4.4.1. The contours of heritage	159
4.4.2. “Bloedbeseëde belydenisskrifte”	162
4.4.3. “Look unto the rock”	165
4.4.4. Naboth’s vineyard.....	168
4.4.5. A spiritual weapon and bulwark	173
4.6. A heritage to build on.....	175
4.6.1. “Koers in die krisis”	176
4.6.2. Spiritual reconstruction	179
4.6.3. “’n Volk red homself”	182
4.5.4. “We believe in unity and diversity”	184
4.7. Conclusion	185
Chapter 5	188
Commemoration and Identity.....	188
5.1. Introduction	188
5.2. “Keep thy feasts”	188
5.3. “South Africa does not easily forget”	193
5.4. Afrikaner liturgy	198
5.4.1. Pentecost.....	201
5.4.2. The inauguration of the Voortrekker monument, 1949.....	205
5.4.3. Day of the Vow	209

5.4.4. Van Riebeeck tercentenary, 1952.....	213
5.5. Memories of the Heidelberg Catechism: 1949-1963	214
5.6. 1963: the fourth centenary of the Heidelberg Catechism	220
5.6.1. The dreariness of Catechism preaching.....	223
5.6.2. The unceasing love for the Catechism	225
5.6.3. The need for the Catechism today	225
5.6.4. Catechism and volk.....	227
5.7. The essence of identity: the 1962 unification of the DRC.....	227
5.7.1. Tilling the soil for unification	228
5.7.2. 1962 and the establishment of a general Synod	232
5.7.3. Unity and diversity?	234
5.7.4. The limits of unity	240
5.7.5. Memory, rationality and imagination.....	246
5.8. Conclusion	247
Chapter 6	250
Conclusion.....	250
6.1. General remarks	250
6.2. Overview of chapters	251
6.3. Concluding remarks.....	261
Bibliography	263
Unspecified authors.....	263
Het Gereformeerd Maandblad	263
Gereformeerde Vaandel.....	263
Die Kerkbode	264
De Onderzoeker.....	267
Ou Paaie.....	268
Periodicals.....	268
Books.....	283
Pamphlets	288
Other	288